Other ways of evaluating 其他表示评价的说法
When evaluating something, writers often avoid using direct expressions such as I believe and I consider. Instead, they use impersonal or indirect expressions such as it seems likely/probable that..., it can be seen that..., this may be considered..., or it has been proved that.... 在评价某事物的时候,作者常常避免使用 I believe 和 I consider 等直接的表达方式,而是使用无人称的或间接的表达方式,例如:it seems likely/probable that..., it can be seen that..., this may be consider that..., it has been proved that...。

When evaluating something as bad, writers often use not and an adjective with a positive meaning, instead of being more direct and using an adjective with a negative meaning. For example, they might say results are not encouraging, rather than results are discouraging. 当对事物作出不好的评价时,作者常常使用 not 加上一个褒义的形容词,而不直接使用一个贬义的形容词。例如:他们会说 results are not encouraging 而不说 results are discouraging。

Words that may cause offence: he 可能导致冒犯的词: he

He, him, his, and himself are sometimes used for referring to a person of either sex, for example in writing about something that may apply to a man or to a woman. However, many people think that this use suggests that women are not included, or that men are more important than women. To avoid causing offence, you can use expressions such as he or she, he/she, s/he, him/her, or him/herself in writing. In conversation, many people say they, them, their, and themselves to refer to a person without mentioning whether the person is male or female. he, him, his 和 himself 有时被用来指任何性别的人,如用来描写男子或女子。然而许多人认为这样用使人觉得女性被排除在外,或者男性比女性更重要。在书面语中为避免冒犯他人,可以用 he or she, he/she, s/he, him/her, him/herself 这类表达法。在会话中,许多人用 they, them, their 和 themselves 来指某个人,而不提及是男是女。

he[2] /hi:/ noun [singular 用单数] spoken 【口】a male animal 雄性动物: I like your parrot. Is it a he or a she? 我喜欢你的鹦鹉。它是公的还是母的?
